Terrible events at a Viking village in the north of England spill over into the present day when a murdered man is discovered near the excavation that archaeologist Kathryn Bailey has been driven to undertake. Just why are local people so against any disturbance of the site? When the goddess Freya seeks to reclaim her own, things get serious, and Helen and Robert Gunn find themselves fighting for the survival of their little daughter as well as their troubled marriage. Paula Roscoe has spun a thrilling psychological ghost story with a fascinating historical twist.
