

“No Secrets Hidden”

Today’s Old Testament lesson is Psalm 139, verses 1 through 12 and verses 23-24. I’ll be reading from the New Revised Standard Version. O Lord, you have searched me and known me. You know when I sit down and when I rise up; you discern my thoughts from far away. You search out my path and my lying down, and are acquainted with all my ways. Even before a word is on my tongue, O Lord, you know it completely. You hem me in, behind and before, and lay your hand upon me. Such knowledge is too wonderful for me; it is so high that I cannot attain it.

Where can I go from your spirit? Or where can I flee from your presence? If I ascend to heaven, you are there; if I make my bed in Sheol, you are there. If I take the wings of the morning and settle at the farthest limits of the sea, even there your hand shall lead me, and your right hand shall hold me fast. If I say, “Surely the darkness shall cover me, and the light around me become night,” even the darkness is not dark to you; the night is as bright as the day, for darkness is as light to you. Search me, O God, and know my heart; test me and know my thoughts. See if there is any wicked way in me, and lead me in the way everlasting. This is God’s word for God’s people. Thanks be to God. Lord bless the reading, hearing, and understanding of your word today. Amen.

Dan and I have all our family pictures hung in the hallway of the parsonage. The other day I walked past a picture we had taken the first year we were married. I’d just come from the bathroom after putting on ½ bottle of make-up don’t want to scare anyone. I got an eyeful of that first year we had with each other. We were 22 and 23. I thought to myself, “Wow, I hardly recognize us, especially Dan.”

I decided to go back into the bathroom and take a better look at myself in the mirror—just to make sure I was really as young looking as I remember. At first, I was rather shocked at what I saw. I stared, poked, pulled my skin up, put on more makeup, added to the mascara and blush but, then it sunk in. That really is me! I thought, “I have changed a lot. We both have!” I guess that’s what Wedding Bell Sunday is all about. You look back and remember and it brings you full circle.

Funny how we try to pretend to ourselves we really haven’t changed that much. And our friends always tell us how great we look! We try to lose weight, maybe get our teeth whitened, wear makeup, and wear modern designer clothes. We might even wear a girdle (although that’s probably not the correct terminology nowadays). We might buy a toupee or try to outrun the young guy at the gym to feel and pretend to ourselves that we haven’t really changed that much.

We pretend. We hide from the truth. We rationalize, but God is one who knows us completely as the psalmist says. There are no secrets hidden from God. God knows everything about us better than we do. What we’ve done, what we’re going to do, what our weaknesses and strengths are, what we’re thinking, and what we’re going to say next.

Sometimes after spending 20 or 30 years with your spouse you know and feel many of those same things. But God, who is perfect, all-knowing, and all-present is one who loves us regardless of knowing all those things we may hide from each other. We may do our best to keep no secrets from our spouse, but at the end of the day, I think most of us admit—we might not tell all.

So, we admit to ourselves that God knows everything and sees everything about us. Why is it then that God would even want to be in a committed relationship with us? We're flawed, imperfect, doubters, hiders, and many times unfaithful. God puts us at the top of his list. He wants to be in a committed relationship with us. In Psalm 139, the first four verses are dominated by the verb "know" (vs. 1, 2, 4).

The psalmist says there's nothing hidden from God about us, he knows us completely—so there's nothing we should try to hide right? If we recognize this and live a life that's filled with God's presence—why not be more candid with God? Why not listen and hear God search our hearts? Why not ask to be shown more about who we really are—not who we think we are? God knows and is committed to us. God loves us. Regardless of all those flaws and imperfections—why not be more candid with God?

God loves us so much, verse 10 says he leads us with his hand and holds us fast so we don't fall or wander away into a dangerous place. God protects us. We're safe. He searches for us until we're found, he knows our hearts, and understands our thoughts. God loves us so completely.

There's a song that's titled "Wrapped Up, Tied Up, Tangled All Up In Jesus." The beginning lines go like this. "Lord, I've searched far and wide, trying to find a love like yours. But in my searching, I've discovered that you were the only true love." Seems like God is the one who's wrapped up, tied up, and tangled all up in us! I'm not so sure sometimes about us being all tangled up in God. We're so very blessed to have a God so devoted to us.

So as we celebrate this Wedding Bell Sunday, we acknowledge the God who walks along with us through our spiritual journey. There's no need to hide anything in our relationship because we're fully known by God. Only because God loves us are we able to love one another. Most of us have the privilege of sharing a lifetime with each other in a close relationship. God's example in love to us is that we should love one another. So let's reach for the example of love that God has given us. Let's love our spouse with the same kind of Godly love that only God can provide.

Let's pray. Holy loving God, instill in us a desire to love each other and those who mean the most to us. As all-knowing and all-present God, we give you thanks for knowing us so completely. You have blessed our union with each other. Make us a help and support to those we love. As we're open and honest with you, help us to be the same with those we love so dearly. Remind us of how you protect us. Grant that our love for each other grows each day as you lead and hold us fast. May we be as devoted to you as we hope to be devoted to each other with your love—the love that passes all understanding. In Christ's name we pray. Amen.
